

Dear Maine Board of Environmental Protection,

We are pleased to present you with this petition affirming this statement:

" We need mining rules that are smart and fair. Maine's mining rules should include strong clean-water protections, and taxpayers should never be left footing the bill for cleanup costs after mining corporations have extracted the profits. "

Attached is a list of individuals who have added their names to this petition, as well as additional comments written by the petition signers themselves.

Sincerely,
Beth Ahearn

Mining rules should reflect the true cost of the activities involved; new rules should protect water and other resources and require companies to restore the land involved once operations have ceased. Lax rules subsidize business at the expense of the environment and our children.

Past practices have demonstrated that there is always contamination to the environment with mining operations. And pollution to any aquifer is impossible (yes, impossible) to clean up. Pollution to surface waters, such as rivers and streams cost millions to clean up. The economic gain from extraction of minerals from Maine's earth pales when compared with the cost.

I hope that you members of the BEP keep in the front of your mind that your purpose is to protect not just Maine's environment, but its citizens as well from threats to their health and welfare. Strip mining which poisons our rivers and streams and thus the water supply of Maine's people and its animal life with toxic runoff needs to be very strictly regulated. And at no time should we citizens be made to pay for cleaning up the mess. This should and must be the responsibility of the companies that caused it.

Mining will simply destroy Maine environment. The clean water, fish and wildlife we are known for , and that quietly generate tens of millions of dollars in fishing and hunting. Mining will only generate millions for one or two people. That's just stupid.

It's bad enough that so much water in the State of Maine is displaced every year for profit by Poland Spring bottling company. Not to mention the poisoning of the Camden hills area from Verizon's tower batteries that were recently crashed in that area. The indoctrinated East/West corridor concept and the strong arming of the corporation involved in that is enough to scare anyone concerned with Maine's water supply. If the water in this State is allowed to be polluted, then we are condemning our local economy already!!!

Having traveled by canoe from the Arctic to Minnesota and from Minnesota to the coast of Maine, I can say vehemently that we are very fortunate to have the clean water in Maine that we do (and not the blue-green algae toxic water that New York is burdened with). Please move forward with weather eye towards keeping Maine waters clean--this is our biggest asset. Thank you.

Water is essential for life. Maine worked hard to clean up our rivers after they were deeply polluted during the era of Mills. Maine's clean, pristine water is one of our most valuable assets. Clean ground water is essential to our lives as most of Maine's citizens are using well water. Water belongs to our citizens. It is not a commodity to be bought and sold... or squandered / contaminated by anyone; especially those focusing on profit.

As a state that derives a significant income from tourism and agriculture, we could easily destroy and forever change that income base while also destroying the health of our residents by mining carelessly. One only needs to look to other mining states for the outcome of carelessness: West Virginia, Kentucky, North Dakota, Montana, Illinois. Please put in place laws and ordinances which prevent the kind of devastation seen in the Blue Ridge, Black Hills and central plains.

Maine is one of the last remaining places in our country with clean water and untouched land. We all have a responsibility to protect this unique state -- for ourselves and for visitors from across the globe. Unregulated mining threatens us all and is not smart economic development. Those who have suffered in other parts of our country are the best indicators of the failure of unsafe and unregulated mining practices. Fair and smart rules are essential!

For capitalism to work, ALL costs must be paid by the producer - in this case the miner. Allowing them to fail to clean up distorts the market. No extraction or mining should ever be allowed until complete cleanup funds are guaranteed.

When mining companies leave a lovely piece of land, they have usually left a desolate, sad, polluted mess which taxpayers have to pay for cleanup. Cleanups never, ever leave a place as clean as before the excavation took place. As a Maine taxpayer, I truly resent any project whose cleanup I have to pay for. I never asked for this project. It is not for anyone's benefit but the already rich CEO's, shareholders, and owners.

Maine's DEP re-right of the mining laws is a corporate give-away. Maine citizens will be left with the pollution and clean-up costs for generations if these laws are enacted. We must learn from the past...that there are no mining operations ever performed in America where the true costs have been born by the mining company that steals the profits and leaves! It's always the citizens who pay!!

She's right - just include ocean water in the list, and delete "mining" (which will leave just "corporations."

I've seen what mining has done to West Virginia, spoiled the land, the creeks, the wildlife, the rivers so there is no reclaiming them. Profits do not trump environment; it only pollutes it. We cannot turn back harm once it is done. Some places which were paradises are now wastelands. Do not let profiteers ruin our land. Bruce Spang

Maine's mining law, drafted at the insistence of J.D. Irving, must be repealed. Improprieties of Maine DEP in suppressing information relevant to drafting the statute, revealed recently in the news media, should make that statute null and void.

These companies such as mining companies or anyone for that matter that pollute our water, air and land are committing criminal acts, I would like to know how they get away with it, if they are not bribing politicians and who ever else is responsible for over seeing them. If a private citizen polluted in the same way as these mining operations are doing he/she would be prosecuted and given heavy fines and jail time. So why are these mining operations treated as royalty and given a pass to get away with it. If there are no laws on the books to prosecute these polluters, then I would have to believe it is intentional, these polluters are bribing politicians and State officials to make sure there are no laws passed to prosecute them. We need to call out politicians, State officials and all who are responsible for over seeing these mining operations and show the people what they are doing, as well as showing what the mines are doing to the water in this state. If those who are responsible for allowing the mines and others to pollute our State, are not called out then we are just as responsible for polluters, politicians and State officials getting away with it. The voters need to know what our politicians and State officials are doing, so we can have an informed public when it comes time for elections.

It is hard to believe that Maine is not heeding the warnings of the projected loss of clean drinking water IN THE WORLD. It is determined that Maine will be one of the few places in THE WORLD, NOT THE U.S., that will have a drinking water supply. How can we ruin this resource so a very few can make money?

REPORTERS TAKE NOTICE: Do not allow any regulatory body or representative to say, "We have no evidence of contamination." That's evasive. Next ask, "Has any laboratory with no conflict of interest checked for toxin concentrations in soil, water, etc?" Most of the time, the Maine Legislature does not appropriate money for such studies and the "we haave no evidence" is true but incomplete, "We have no evidence" because we have not checked!!

The State of Maine needs to safeguard our water (and air) for its residents and citizens; just as the (federal) Clean Water Act (the Clean Air Act) , and the Environmental Protection Agency; have the responsibility to protect our NATION'S water and air; that is, for the common good (e.g. humans and wildlife).

Sulfide mining is NOT a good bargain for Maine. Don't pollute our environment. It's the only one we have. Don't allow the false, unsubstantiated and hollow promises of the mining industry saddle Maine's people, fish and wildlife with huge economic burdens, loss of recreational opportunities and severe and very long-term environmental degradation.

Mining companies must be held accountable for safe mining practices as well as any cost of clean up in perpetuity. Maine taxpayers should not have to pay the costs on any needed remedial clean-up of mining company digs, projects or their associated costs of mining in Maine. JPS

I've seen the Kennebec and especially the Androscoggin change from industrial sewers to productive waterways, over the protests of the polluters. Let's not set ourselves up to have to do this all over again.

Clean water should always be a priority, without question. And mining companies need to be held accountable for the problems they create. By accepting the terms for profit, they also must accept responsibility for any damages incurred as a result.
